

Coronavirus: COVID-19
Current Update – March 3, 2023

Public Health Ontario’s Weekly COVID-19 Summary

Public Health Ontario (PHO) warns us to interpret these trends with caution because they are not entirely accurate. COVID-19 cases, contacts, and outbreaks are only being managed in high-risk populations and settings. There is also a delay in reporting, especially with severe outcomes and deaths. Reported case counts are a severe underestimate of the actual extent of COVID-19 infections in Ontario.

Last week, indicators for COVID-19 were similar overall compared to the previous week. The number of reported COVID-19 cases in Ontario was 3,944 compared to 4,374 the week before. Last week, there were 256 reported COVID-19-related hospitalizations, which is lower than the week before, and 32 reported COVID-19-related deaths, which is the same as the week before.

The total number of confirmed, ongoing COVID-19 outbreaks in high-risk settings is 93, compared to 81 outbreaks the week before. The number of outbreaks decreased in Long-Term Care homes (from 31 to 20) and hospitals (from 25 to 24), but increased in retirement homes (from 13 to 27) and congregate living settings, such as group homes/supportive housing, shelters and correctional facilities (from 12 to 22).

Black Mental Health Week is Next Week!

As we move out of Black History Month, the City of Toronto is excited to continue its Black liberation work by facilitating Black Mental Health Week (BMHW).

BMHW provides more opportunities to facilitate and cultivate greater awareness of the impacts of anti-Black racism on Toronto’s Black communities. BMHW takes place annually during the first full week of March. This year’s BMHW is Monday, March 6 2023 - Sunday, March 12, 2023.

This year, BMHW is hosted by the TAIBU Community Health Centre and the City of Toronto’s Confronting Anti-Black Racism Unit, in partnership with Tropicana Community Services, Strides Toronto, Black Health Alliance, Women’s Health in Women’s Hands, Delta Family Resource Centre, George Hull Centre for Children and Families, Loyan Foundation, and the Africa Centre.

This year's theme is "Be You, Be Well". As Toronto's Black communities continue to manage the impacts of anti-Black racism and repair from the COVID-19 pandemic, this year's campaign reminds Torontonians of African Descent that recovery is about embracing a holistic view of self. The week will be used to raise self-awareness and help reaffirm cultural connections and social identities for a healthy self. Accepting wellness is an ongoing journey. During Black Mental Health Week, individuals and communities will be equipped with knowledge, skills, and resources to do that.

The week will consist of various in-person and/or virtual discussions, activities, and events organized and hosted by various Black-serving community organizations. Inspired by this year's theme, these activities will work to include and target various groups within Toronto's Black communities, including but not limited to, Black Youth, and Black formerly incarcerated communities, and Black communities living with HIV / AIDS.

Please visit blackmentalhealthweek.ca (click here) for more details and to register for events.

The Burn: reflecting on the COVID-19 pandemic through art

Toronto residents are invited to heal and cleanse through the restorative power of rising heat, ash, smoke and water. The Burn, an interactive art installation inspired by the universally sacred elements of fire and water, provides a sanctuary for comfort and care with rituals of intention setting, releasing and letting go.

Until March 11, residents are invited to engage with The Burn's travelling vessels by setting healing intentions on wooden spheres. Following the tour, take part in a commemorative ceremony on Nathan Phillips Square on Saturday, March 11, where the wooden spheres will be ignited for a 24-hour burn. Ashes from The Burn will be harvested, mixed into soil and spread across city gardens to honour the spirit of our collective healing. More information is available at Toronto.ca/TheBurn.

This installation is part of Stronger TOgether, a program for Toronto residents to recognize and reflect on the COVID-19 pandemic. More information is available at Toronto.ca/StrongerTOgether.
